

Your Consent

We hope this research will help us learn about how individuals find and use health information online.

The purpose of this form is to explain what you can expect from the research study and to protect your privacy.

The study includes a survey about your health and internet experiences, completion of online tasks (such as searching, reviewing search results, and navigation) and answering questions about these tasks, and a survey about you.

The study takes about 30 minutes to complete.

After you finish the study, you will have an opportunity to enter yourself in a raffle. When the entire study is complete, four prizes of $50 each will be awarded at random to individuals who completed the study and entered themselves in the raffle.

You must be at least 18 years old to participate.

You always have the option to quit at any time, for any reason (for example, if you are upset by recalling a sad moment due to past or present illness). Your participation will help us help others, but may not help you directly.

We will not mention anything that could be used to identify you or anyone else in anything we publish. We will store all data in a secure location. We will keep your contact information separate from all other data.

However, if Carnegie Mellon is required to in a legal case, we may have to disclose more information.

If you have any questions about this study, please email us before continuing.

If you have questions later, want additional information, or want to withdraw your consent please contact:
